INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The Institute for Marriage and Public Policy (iMAPP) is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, nonpartisan organization dedicated to high quality research and public education on ways that law and public policy can strengthen marriage as a social institution. Working with top scholars, public officials, and community leaders, iMAPP brings the latest research to bear on important policy questions, seeking to promote thoughtful, informed discussion of marriage and family policy at all levels of American government, academia, and civil society.

The Institute for Marriage and Public Policy is committed to advancing civil and thoughtful debate over the public purposes of marriage and our marriage laws. Accordingly, iMAPP is concerned by recent trends toward increasing hostility, intimidation and even violence surrounding the public debate over same-sex marriage.

By carefully documenting a wide range of reprisals directed against people and groups who supported Proposition 8, iMAPP believes this brief will assist the Court as it considers some of the legal issues presented in this case.

INTRODUCTION

Support for Proposition 8 has come with a heavy price for many individuals and institutions who think that marriage should be recognized as the union of husband and wife in California.¹ Publicly available sources show that expressions of support for Prop 8 have generated a range of reprisals, including harassment, intimidation, vandalism, racial scapegoating, blacklisting, loss of employment, economic hardships, angry protests, violence, at least two death threats, and gross

¹Much of the information and many of the incidents documented in this brief have been set forth in a report previously published by The Heritage Foundation. See THOMAS M.  4 supporting Prop 8.⁴

REPRISALS AGAINST PROP 8 SUPPORTERS

 6
 7 Many reports of hostility toward Prop 8 supporters involve acts of vandalism.⁵ For example,

1 UNDERSTANDING THE ANIMOSITY SURROUNDING SUPPORT FOR PROP 8

2 Arguments for same-sex marriage, although often couched in terms of tolerance and
 3 inclusion, are frequently based on the idea that preserving marriage as unions of husband and wife
 4 is a form of bigotry, irrational prejudice, and even hatred against homosexual persons who want the
 5 state to license their relationships.⁵⁷ As increasing numbers of individuals and institutions, including
 6 public officials and governmental bodies, embrace this ideology, belief in marriage as a relationship
 7 between a man and a woman likely will come to be viewed as an unacceptable form of 8 discrimination that should be purged from public life through legal, economic, and social pressure.
 9 The malevolence directed against Prop 8 supporters vividly illustrates this dynamic and the 10 potential for it to morph into threatening, destructive, and even violent behavior.

12 Some same-sex marriage activists have condemned certain types of reprisals against Prop 8

1 supporters.⁵⁸ Some reprisals against Prop 8 supporters have involved illegal conduct. Some acts of
2 hostility have been perpetrated by random individuals acting in isolation or by unpredictable crowds
3 expressing anger and frustration.

4 But the fact remains that many Prop 8 supporters have paid a considerable price for 5 defending marriage as the union of husband and wife. Indeed, no matter who is to blame for the 6 hostility surrounding Prop 8, one lesson of Prop 8 cannot be denied: Individuals or institutions that 7 publicly defend marriage as the union of husband and wife risk harassment, reprisal, and 8 intimidation—at least some of it targeted and coordinated.

9 Because the issue of marriage is still very much alive in California and throughout the 10 nation, the naked animosity and disapprobation manifested against people and groups who 11 supported Prop 8 raises serious questions that should concern all parties interested in promoting
12 civil society, democratic processes, and reasoned discourse on important matters of public policy
13 like marriage.
